Our estate litigation services include:

Contesting Wills

A Family Provision claim is an application to the Supreme Court for a share, or a larger share, from the estate of a deceased person. Where adequate provision has not been made for the proper maintenance and support of certain categories of persons relating to the deceased, the Court may make an order that such provision be made out of the estate in your favour.

Defending Wills

Defending a Will in the event that a family provision claim is made can be complicated and stressful without trusted legal advice. At Attwood Marshall Lawyers, we feel a deep sense of responsibility to protect the wishes of the deceased and can help you ensure the deceased's Will or testamentary intentions are fulfilled.

Challenging Wills

If you are concerned about the validity of a Will, our Estate Litigation team can assist you in bringing a challenge against the Will in Court. The most common reasons for challenging a Will include lack of testamentary capacity, suspicious circumstances, undue influence, or if the Will was not signed or witnessed properly, just to name a few.

Executor & Beneficiary Disputes

It is common for disputes to arise between Executors, Administrators and beneficiaries during the course of an estate administration. When conflict occurs it can be disastrous for the overall administration of the estate due to amplified stress, increased costs, and resultant delays. We can help you understand the relationship between Executors, Administrators and beneficiaries and your rights, duties and obligations.

Public Trustee & Guardian Disputes

Our experienced Estate Litigation Lawyers can help you remove the Public Trust Office and seek compensation for the mismanagement of your financial affairs, or that of a loved one.

Statutory Wills

A Will is an important document for every person and can provide assurance and peace of mind to a Will-maker. However, what happens to those who lack the capacity to write a Will? A Statutory Will application is a formal process that, if successful, can provide assurance to minors or those who lack capacity and their families, ensuring that their Will-making intentions are fulfilled.
